5

Abstract of the Invention

Information is acquired indicative of a location scenario where a plurality of software components are to be installed. The location scenario is employed to configure the software components, such as by setting at least some of the components as default components to facilitate selection and/or configuration of the software components during a setup process. The location scenario further may be employed to configure selected components to have functionality based on the location scenario.